Excused Absences from Practicum due to Workshops and Presentations

Graduate students are encouraged to attend various workshops and presentations as a part of their professional development. However, site clinical educators are responsible for deciding if a student should be excused to attend a workshop or presentation. The decision should depend on the number of absences the student has had during the semester and how much the absence would affect the clients at the site. The student must discuss this with the clinical educator to arrive at a decision concerning attendance.
